

Good Outlook For Soft Ball Here

Redcliff in League With Medicine Hat Players

Present indications are that we are going to have a real live soft ball organization in town this year. Not only are the players getting busy and making the preliminary arrangements but citizens generally are showing an interest in this line of sport.

Already all the merchants in town have signified their willingness to supply the players with sweaters, some merchants providing one on which will be carried an adv. for his business. For this the players wish us to extend their hearty thanks to the merchants concerned.

The local organization has entered into the league with Medicine Hat, so that a goodly number of games will be assured for the season. The first league game will be played in Medicine Hat on Monday, April 9th, against the Club Cafe team of that city.

A new diamond is being laid out in Redcliff just west of the skating rink on Broadway and two local teams will open the season on it next Sunday afternoon. The local team is now ready to meet all comers for friendly games during the summer, arrangements for which may be made with W. Campeau or Shorty Mathew.

SAYS MONITORIUM WILL DOUBLE UNEMPLOYMENT

A warning that Alberta's unemployed problem would be doubled if a monitorium was adopted by this province, was sounded by Premier Brynne last Saturday. The house was at that time debating the resolution moved by F. C. Moyer, in dependence, Drumheller, to provide the relief for farmers.

The premier showed that proposal would destroy present sources of credit. He declared it would mean that the government would have to shoulder burdens now carried by the banks. This relief would have been of greater assistance a year ago than at the present time, he said.

Vimy Anniversary To Be Celebrated Here

Local Legion to Hold Smoker in Club Rooms

Vimy Ridge anniversary will be fittingly remembered in Redcliff next Saturday evening when the local Legion will put on a smoker to which all interested are invited.

A good program is being prepared by the entertainment committee and we are assured some novel features will be introduced during the evening. Tickets at 75c each are now out and may be secured from the steward at the club or from any member of the committee. As only a limited number can be accommodated tickets should be secured as soon as possible. Refreshments will be served during the evening.

Vezia Lodge is going to hold a Bazaar in their lodge hall on Friday, April 29th, at 2:30 p.m. with refreshments in next week's issue.

There are over 450 miles of motor highway, 100 miles of rail, 2,400 miles of telephone line, 1,100 miles of telegraph line in Canada, which cover an area of over 3,800 square miles in different parts of the Dominion.

San Francisco was an late arrival for the British Empire Exhibition. The liner Empress of Britain arrived there from Honolulu for a two day stop on her 118-day winter cruise of world ports. About 50 additional passengers joined the ship at San Francisco and another ship at Los Angeles before the late departure for the Panama Canal to New York.

The "Alfred Position of the British Empire" is the suggestive paper by Charles Canham, Deputy Minister of Mines, which will be the leading topic for discussion at the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, in Montreal on April 6 and 7. This same topic will provide much discussion at the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference.

Belief that economic conditions were gradually improving and that the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa would be one of the big historical events in the development of the Dominion, was expressed by Senator George Robertson, former Minister of Labor, who sailed on S.S. Montreal from Halifax recently as Canada's chief delegate to the International Labor organization at Geneva.

Canada's rapid changes from an exporter of raw minerals to an exporter of finished and semi-finished products will be well set forth at the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy in Montreal on April 6 and 7. A number of important papers will describe the new minerals and relations that have affected this change.

With five steamers in service between Port McNicoll and the head of the Lake during the coming season, the Canadian Pacific Railway is becoming more and more of a factor in the development of the points in western Canada, via Port McNicoll, and the Lake and rail route tends to delay at Port McNicoll pending the first sailing.

Change in the management of Maritime Province summer hotels of the Canadian Pacific Railway will shortly become official. Joseph W. Smith, who managed the Lakeside Inn, Yarmouth, N.S., and is at present in charge of the Fine View Hotel in Montreal, will be succeeded by Mr. A. H. Smith, who will be managing the Lakeside Inn by Jeremiah Smith, Jr., now chief clerk at the Cornwall Inn, Kentville, N.S.

Mr. F. S. Fayet, D. D. G. M. for Masonic district no. 2 paid an official visit to Quarry Lodge at their regular meeting here last Tuesday evening. He was accompanied by a number of the brothers from Medicine Hat. After the business of the meeting refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

Emil Lust outpointed Cowboy Sammy Evans of Great Falls, Montana, in a ten round exhibition bout in the Hat last Friday evening under the auspices of United Commercial Travellers of that city. Usually there is little representation from Redcliff at all boxing tournaments but on this occasion there were none, as they didn't know any better about it since it wasn't advertised in the Review.

Widows' Allowance Is Cut Ten Per Cent

In the legislature this session the members led by a government proposal, reduced their indemnity by ten per cent, as a gesture on their part to show a little personal magnanimity in helping to balance the budget during these times of depression. For a moment this looked like a mighty white thing for them to do, but when in the next breath they decided to cut the widows' allowance ten per cent also apparent magnanimity paled into insignificance. Eye worse than that.

Here were sixty odd men, supposedly representing the brains and feelings of the people of the province, who, with one hand took $150 a month out of the provincial treasury for themselves for the heart of being members of the legislature, with the other hand take from two to ten dollars a month from poor widows who have been trying to get along—God knows how—from twenty to fifty dollars a month with which to provide food, clothing, light and heat for themselves and those depending on them.

These noble legislators, all of whom are in politics as a side line, and all of whom have some other source of revenue and are not depending on their seasonal indemnity for a living, think nothing of sticking their hands into the provincial money pocket and taking $150 a month each out for themselves and at the same time think they are gloriously magnanimous in expecting a widow with three or four children to live and move and have their being on a third of that amount.

And what does the legislature expect to gain by this cutting of the widows' allowance? A mere drop in a bucket when compared with the provinces receipts and expenditures, and its many sources of securing revenue. Taking this one figure the saving would be around $48,000 a year. If the members of our legislature are the big, wise, magnanimous beings we are sometimes led to believe they are; they could easily lop enough off their own indemnities to make up this amount and still be fairly well paid for their services in hard times like these.

It is an old saying that in times of stress those most able to pay should be made to pay. Surely it cannot be thought, by any stretch of the imagination that widows, who, because of their circumstances, are forced to ask for benefits of the allowance, are best able to contribute to the balancing of the budget. It is discouraging and disappointing that in a supposedly Christian and civilized country like this it should be necessary or possible to resort to such means in order for the government to make ends meet.

Australia's cricket team which will tour Canada this summer, will play in Calgary April 10th.

The town has a number of unemployed to work this week. At present they are grinding Fifth street and outfitting in a number of new brick crossings on that street.

Federal Budget Shows Increase in Debt.

Unemployment and Farm Relief Cost Much

The anxiously awaited budget was brought down in the Federal parliament yesterday by finance minister, Hon. E. N. Macdonald. As was expected the budget shows a marked falling off in revenue and an increase in expenditures, a large amount of the latter being due to unemployment relief and the wheat bonus. The account for 49 million dollars of which Alberta's share was over five million.

Canada's increase in debt for the fiscal year just ended is $119,505,000. Of this total, only $51,024,000 arises from the excess of ordinary expenditure over ordinary revenue.

As was also expected the budget makes provision for increased taxes all along the line from which it is expected to raise an additional 55 million dollars. The sales tax is increased from 4 per cent to 6 per cent, excise tax on all goods imported into Canada increased by 2 1/2% on cheques, money orders over $5, and on promissory notes, bills of exchange, etc. the rate is increased from 2c to 3c on amounts up to $100 and 6c over $100; a 55c tax is imposed on telegrams, cables and radio messages, and long distance calls on railway exchange car berths the tax will be 10c and 10c of chair car tickets.

DRY BELT FARMERS WILL RECEIVE SEED

Farmers in the dry belt of Southeastern Alberta will again be assisted with seed grain through combined efforts of the government and municipalities. Hon. George Healey stated last Saturday.

Department of Agriculture estimates are that approximately 140,000 bushels seed wheat will be required for this purpose, 160,000 bushels of oats and more than 100,000 bushels of barley. This grain already is in storage for the most part in elevators within reach of the areas requiring relief.

NEWFOUNDLAND PREMIER ESCAPES A MOB

Premier Sir Richard Squires of Newfoundland was threatened with violence by a mob which stormed the House of Assembly last Tuesday evening. He was rescued by two protestant ministers and a priest who took him to a private residence.

The premier and his government had just resigned as a result of charges of graft made against them.

The mob threatened to throw the premier in to the harbor.

Hat Redcliff Football Asso. is Organized

Will Not Affiliate With A. F. A. This Year

The Medicine Hat Redcliff football association will not affiliate with the Alberta Football Association this year. This matter was taken at their annual meeting held in Medicine Hat, last Monday evening, and was done as a protest against what was considered unfair treatment meted out to smaller centers by A. F. A. officials.

The question of introducing new rules to allow for substituting players when the game in progress was also brought up and after a lengthy discussion it was decided not to introduce that system this year.

The constitution was also amended to provide for representatives from each club to be a member of the football council with full voting power.

The following of the Association were elected:

President—J. Sangster. Sec.—H. J. Noble. Patrons—Dr. Gershaw, H. Lang, Mayor Belliveau, Mayor Worts, P. M. Simpson, W. E. McCombe, G. M. Blackstock, J. J. Hendricks, A. L. N. Terrill and E. L. Stone. Council—C. H. Parks, H. Wall and A. Stratton, with one representative from each club. The league will be made up of four teams again this year, two from Medicine Hat and two from Redcliff.

Tribute To Canada

Canadian Resident in the United States, Present Marble Tablet To Donor

The Governor-General of Canada, the Earl of Beesborough, unveiled recently a marble group in the Hall of Fame in the Parliament Building at Ottawa, placed there through contributions of Canadians, resident in the United States. The memorial, commemorating the sixtieth year of federation, was the result of activities directed by a memorial committee headed by W. W. Colpitts, former president of the Canadian Club in New York. It was to have been presented in 1927 when Canada was celebrating the sixtieth birthday of the Dominion, but various circumstances caused the delay.

The presentation was made by Mr. Colpitts and Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, spoke the words of acceptance. The ceremony was brief, taking less than fifteen minutes.

Seated on the platform, erected near the memorial, were their Excellencies, the Prime Minister and Mr. Colpitts, representatives of the foreign countries and several members of the cabinet. Following the Prime Minister's acknowledgment of the memorial, Hon. H. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works, passed the stolen cord to the Governor-General who drew aside the flags veiling the group while the Temple choir, massed on the gallery bridging the main corridor, sang "Land of Hope and Glory."

"The government, on behalf of the people of Canada, thank you for the gift of this memorial, and for the way you convey our thanks to the members of your committee," said Mr. Bennett. "We accept it as an evidence of the fine spirit in the hearts and minds of Canadians who, although they live abroad, have not forgotten the claims of the home land. Her excellency described the memorial as 'a token of the pride Canadians abroad feel for their home land and a tribute to the achievements which made it great.'"

"There are more than a million people of Canadian birth living in the United States, scattered throughout the length and breadth of the land," said Mr. Colpitts. "Nothing could speak more eloquently of the unity of purpose, the similarity of ideals and the friendly feeling that exists between the two peoples, than the fact that in many Canadian homes found domestic and happiness and contentment in the republic across the border. They exercise a power for good and for the maintenance of cordial relations between the peoples of the two countries."

The memorial, a mural in white marble, is placed on the wall of the Hall of Fame near the entrance to the library and occupies a similar work placed there in tribute to the nursing profession. On the pedestal are engraved the words: "To commemorate the sixtieth year of federation, Canadians in the United States gave this in token of their devotion to the country of their birth and as a proud tribute to the achievements of its founders."

The group of figures represents Canada's past, present and future, and are symbolic of the industries and professions that entered into the building up of the country.

Singing, Has Wonderful Psychological Effect

Makes People Happy and Rouses World and Brings a Broadside

There is nothing that children love so well as to hear their mothers sing unless it is their fathers whistling. Mother may not know a note from another and father's idea of a tune may be just too bad but they sing, and so it goes. Urges Oliver Roberts, Barton, who does not mean to get a book and copy down words from the new Value hit on the radio or to get out the old hymnal and memorize "Old Hundred," so long forgotten, or to try to master the tricky syncopation of the latest "blues" dance music. By right she means nanner.

Neither do you need to go in for the "Singing Song," or the "Singing Song," or even the eternal meditation from Thais that solitists have meditated on too long.

"Sing these if you like, but 'Three Blind Mice' will do just as well, or 'Turkey in the Straw,' or just 'Tum-tum-tum-tum-tum.'"

There is something in what you sing, or hum, or run. The important thing is to smile with your voice and your eyes and to sing with the heart and the house and the children know that there is something in your heart besides spinach and rubbers and snatches of every: something besides little words, fatigue, baby's cold, Papa's job, Aunt Maria's visit, the old broom, the old burned beans, the broken pipe, and all their drab broths.

One time a denator told about his mother. He told about the little house and the family of boys going to work before daylight with their pale, little, clay, too, and coming home after dark. His mother always sang. She woke them up with her singing in the morning and when they came in at night there she was singing at the stove.

He said that through all his life he has heard her sing. Her voice has carried him through terrible places and he could not say he could not carry on. "Because," he added, "she had it harder than I ever possibly could have. No one knows what she went through and endured. And I get ashamed of myself as I look back and think how she could sing."

Sometimes when Tommy is bad and won't mind, try singing. Watch him may out of it if everybody is in the mood and in the dumps see if you can't remember "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," or "Bibbity," or "Carcara" and see how the family chirps up.

The first thing you know they'll be singing too, at least singing in their hearts.

A wise man once said that people sing their worries and obsessions in the open air.

We might dare anyone to be unhappy while he sings.

Useful Living

Everyone Owes To The World Some Little Contribution That Makes Life Richer

Thomas Edison died with a personal estate of some $15,000,000. The industrial value of his inventions is estimated at not less than $15,000,000,000.

Thus for every dollar Edison earned for himself, he earned a thousand dollars for humanity.

This is useful living. There are those, like Edison, whose lives add to the wealth and progress of the world. There are many others who in their passage through this world succeed only in sapping the strength and determining the quality of mankind.

It is upon the lives of the Edisons that the thousands like him who have contributed more highly to the world's fortunes than they have to their own fortunes that all the progress of humanity has been founded.

The world owes no man a living, but every man owes to the world a living. His contribution that will make human life richer and sweeter for his passing by.

Edison's contribution to this fund of human happiness was notable. His attitude towards life has a spiritual value high above the material value of his inventions.—Winthrop Tribune.

Antient Libraries

Although the ancient libraries had parchment rolls instead of books they resembled modern ones in many ways. At Timagad, in Roman Africa, was a delightful public library which was the gift of a benevolent citizen, and it was furnished as one might be to day, with tables and comfortable chairs where the reader could sit at ease to consult the work he had borrowed.

A man's temper improves the more he doesn't use it.

Japanese War-Dog Shows Its Teeth

Here is a spectacular picture, taken at the exact instant when some of Japan's mighty battleships showed their teeth and fired a broadside. A similar scene, but of more grim significance, occurred when Japanese warships in the Wango River bombarded the Chinese fort at Woosung, coincident with the landing of Japanese Marines in Shanghai.

Privacy Council Decision

Final Ottawa Has the Right To Control Radio Communication In Canada

Parliament of Canada has the right to regulate and control radio communication in the Dominion, the judicial committee of the privacy council has decided in dismissing the appeal of the attorney-general of Quebec against the Supreme Court of Canada's decision. Ottawa was associated with Quebec in the appeal.

Once it is decided that a transmitting instrument must be under control of the Dominion, it follows that a receiving instrument must share its fate, their lordships emphasize.

No costs are awarded, this matter being left for decision between the Dominion and the provinces. It is a matter for congratulation, the judgment adds, "that the result seems consonant with common sense. Divided control between a transmitter and receiver could only lead to confusion and inefficiency."

Their lordships noted the Canadian supreme court judges expressed regret they did not know, at the time of their decision, of the conclusion of the privacy council in regard to the control of aviation. Had the supreme court known aviation was a matter for the Dominion, parliament, it would certainly only have confirmed the opinion of the majority, the privacy council added.

Canadian Cadets

Winners in Matches Conducted By Local Association

Monsieur St. Cyr, of the Commercial Academy, Quebec, led all Canadian cadets in the 1931 competition for the Galtier Hagerty Memorial prizes. It was announced at Ottawa. He scored a total of 400 points in the small bore rifle matches conducted by the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association and open to cadets of each nation in the district. C. L. Roberts, of the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, Man., was second with 399 points.

The winners with military distinctions included: No. 11, E. Laddell, Vancouver, B.C.; 12, D. Metger, Melfort, Sask.; 13, Renaldi Stocco, Wayne, Alberta.

Mitigation and St. Pierre, two small rocks, islands 10 miles off the coast of Newfoundland, are the only remaining possessions of France in America.

A Market For Canadian Cheese

New Zealand, Is Only Competitor Says Farm Magazine

Farmers may find much for thought in a recent editorial of the Canadian Countryman. It is the largest and most influential of the farm magazines in Canada. The substance of the article is that Canada should concentrate on cheese production and leave the Empire butter market to New Zealand and other countries.

For years Canada has occupied a prominent place in the Old Country cheese market. Now, states the Countryman, "our cheese exports have declined and buyers in the Old Country market declare that an little Canadian cheese is coming forward it is scarcely worth while handling it."

Going further into the matter the Canadian Countryman claims that it would be easier for Canadian dairy men to retain their hold on the Empire market with cheese than to try and compete in the butter market. For New Zealand has been coming with us in cheese, while with butter we meet the exports of 20 other countries.

Manitoba Census

Final Figures On Population Issued By Bureau Of Statistics

Final figures of the population of Manitoba were issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics recently. The population has increased from 610,000 in 1921 to 702,329 in 1931. Cities have increased as follows: Brandon, from 19,887 to 17,683; St. Boniface, 12,821 to 14,805; Winnipeg, from 19,887 to 218,785. The population of Portage la Prairie decreased from 4,766 to 4,597.

Repairing Farm Machinery

Spare Time Can Be Used In Extending Life Of Implements

W. C. Coffey, dean of agriculture, University of Minnesota, addressing a gathering of farmers at the North West School Farmers' Week at Crookston, made the following timely suggestions.

Spare time can be used in repairing and extending the life of machinery so that expense at this point can be saved. It does not pay to use machinery that is worn out or badly in need of repair, but in difficult times like the present it does not pay to buy new machinery when the life of the old machine can be extended at very little expense."

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

—BY—

MARGARET FIEDLER
Author of "The House of Dreams-Come-True"
Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

With an effort of will Jean tried to banish the recollection of Sir Adrian from her thoughts. The picture of his thin, hunched back, the lines of his cruel mouth and furtive, mischievous eyes, that set of harmony with this sort of day of spring, she wished she had not let the thought of him intrude upon her pleasant reverie at all. His sinister figure seemed to cast a shadow over the sunny day, a shadow which grew bigger and bigger, blurring the green of the trees and the sky's faint blue, and even obscuring the comfortable little chirps of the birds, busy with their spring housekeeping. At least, Jean couldn't hear them any longer, and she took no notice even when one enterprising young cock-bird hopped near enough to flick a feather that was sticking out from the corner of the cushion behind her.

The next thing she was conscious of was of sitting up with great suddenness, under the impression that she had overheard and the housemaid was calling to her very loudly to waken her.

Someone was calling—shouting lustily, in fact, and collecting her sleep-laden features, she realized that instead of being securely moored against the bank her boat was rocking gently in mid-stream, and that the occupant of another boat, coming from the opposite direction, was doing her loudest best to attract her attention, since just at that point the river was too narrow for them to pass one another without coming well in towards the bank.

Jean reached hastily for her pulley, only to find, to her intense astonishment, that it had been completely as though they had never existed. She cast a rapid glance of dismay around her, scanning the banks of the water in her vicinity for any trace of them. But there was none. She was floating serenely down the middle of the stream, perfectly helpless to pull out of the way of the on-coming boat.

Meanwhile its occupant was calling out instructions—lampers his wrath with an irritable kind of politeness as he perceived that the fool whose craft blocked the way was of the feminine persuasion.

"Pull in a bit please. We can't pass here if you don't. . . . Pull in!" he yelled rather more loudly as Jean's boat still remained in the full of the river, drifting listlessly towards the shore.

She flung up her hand.

"I can't!" she shouted back. "I've lost my scull!"

"Lost your scull?" The man's tones sufficiently implied what he thought of the proceeding.

A couple of strokes, and gripping the gunwale of her boat as he drew level, he steered it to a standstill alongside his own.

Jean's eyes travelled swiftly from the aquarum muscular-looking hand that gripped the boat's side to the face of its owner. He was distinctly an ugly man as far as features were concerned, with a dogged-looking nose and a coppering back of a nose that jutted out arrogantly from his hatchet-face. The sun glinted on a crop of reddish-brown hair, hanging crisply from the scalp in a way that suggested immense vitality; Jean had an idea that it would give out tiny crackling sounds if it were brushed hard. His eyebrows, running in defence against the sun, were of the same hue as his hair, very thick and in later life they would probably develop into the bristling, post-hoc variety. That it was otherwise, as Jean described them, on a later occasion, was "too red to be brown"; an artist would have had to make extensive use of burnt sienna pigments in portraying them. Altogether, he was not a particularly attractive-looking individual—and just now the red-brown eyes were fixed on Jean in a rather uncomprehending glare.

"How on earth did you lose your scull?" he demanded so indignantly as though she had done it on purpose, she commented inwardly.

"I have no recollection of the endeavour to suppress a smile.

"I haven't the least idea," she confessed, "I was up under one tree further up and—ah! and I suppose I must have fallen asleep. But still that boat's scull—how I came to be adrift like this!"

"A woman's luck, I expect," he vouchsafed rather scornfully. "A woman never does the same thing before without any evil consequences. There's hardly any current here, you know, I don't believe it's up properly. Probably my loop could have unloosed itself. And anyway"—triumphantly—"the scull could have jumped out of the boat's bow—disturbance."

The man smiled, revealing strong white teeth.

"No," he supposed not. I fancy"—the smile broadening—"some small boy must have spotted you asleep in the boat, and finding the oarlock too good to be resisted, removed your tackle and set a yank at it."

There was a sympathetic twinkle in his eyes, and Jean, suddenly sensing that "little boy" in him which lurked in every grown-up man, dashed back.

"I believe that's exactly what you would have done yourself in your urchin days."

"I believe it is," he acknowledged, laughing outright. "Well, the only thing to do now is for me to tow you back. Where do you want to go—up down the river?"

"Up, please. I want to get back to Staple."

He threw a quick glance at her.

"Surely you must be Miss Peterson?"

She nodded.

"Yes. How did you guess?"

"My sister, Mrs. Craig, told me a Miss Peterson was staying at Staple. It's different, after that, to put two and two together."

"Then you must be Geoffrey Burke's," returned Jean.

He nodded.

"That's right. So now that we have met each other, will you come into my parlour?"—smiling. "I'm going to take you back there, some reason why we wouldn't accompany the journey together and tow you back behind."

He held out his hand to steady her as she stepped lightly from one boat to the other, and soon they were gliding smoothly upstream, the empty scull left in their wake.

"For a while Burke sculled in a silence, and Jean leant back, eye watching the situation, rhythmic, giving her body as he bent to his oars. His shirt was open at the throat, revealing the strong, broad-necked chest, and she noticed in a detached fashion that small, dark hairs covered his bare arms with a golden down, even on the lower, muscular hands."

She found herself festively conscious that the most dominant quality about the man was his sheer virility. Nor was it just a matter of appearance. It lay in something more fundamental than merely external. She had known men of great physical strength to be not infrequently fitted with an almost feminine gentleness of nature, yet she was sure this latter element played but a small part in the make-up of Geoffrey Burke.

The absolute ease with which he went the boat shoring through the water seemed to her in some way typical. It conveyed a sense of ease that was unquestionable, even a little overpowering.

She felt certain that he was, above and before all other things, a powerful man, forceful and conquering, of the type who in a different age would have cheerfully bloodshed his way through any and every obstacle that stood between him and the woman he had chosen as his mate—and then, afterwards, if necessary, bludgeoned the life herself into submission.

"You seem where you tied up them?" Burke's voice broke suddenly across her thoughts, and she looked around, recognizing the place where she had moored her boat earlier in the afternoon.

"How did you divine that?" she asked.

"It didn't require much divination. There are your sculls"—pointing—"stuck up against the trunk of the tree. And then, if you didn't mind, I might tattle over at any moment. I fancy"—with a smile—"that my small boy would have done it."

"I believe I could even put a name to the particular link of Satan responsible," he went on, leaning over the gunwale of his boat.

"Willow Ferry side of the stream, and our lodge-keeper's kids are a troop of young rascals. They want a thorough good thrashing, and see that they get it before they are much older."

He pulled to the shore and re-located the sculls from their present position, restored them to the empty boat.

"The same," he added, as a few minutes later, he helped Jean out on to the little wooden landing place at the end of the stream.

Chances Never Better For Helping Others

Most Can Be Done Even If Money Is Scarce

There are less than five million people in the world who are poor. In many minds it is how long with these times that we can outlast them. Innumerable people would like to be helped by their families. It is a pity they can't. It would bring their problems a good deal nearer the solution. As it is, they are on the verge of starvation. In spite of the manifold attractions of information, the answer to that must be "Go On Living."

If you can't live as you do, live as you do.

If you really amount to a little something your personality may be more valuable than you suspect, and if you happen to have a lot of money, the glare and cars, and of perpetual planning for its dissipation may have obscured other values.

Money, of course, is helpful to the doing of many things, but there is a limit to that. It is not a great thing that can be done without it. Great things that may be done are things that can be done without it. Great things that may be done are things that can be done without it.
